IMPERIAL ASSAULT™

CAMPAIGN GUIDE

CAMPAIGN GUIDE

This book contains 30 missions to be played with Imperial Assault. Many of these missions link together to form the core campaign, but this book also contains numerous side missions that can be played in the core or any future campaign.

HIDDEN INFORMATION

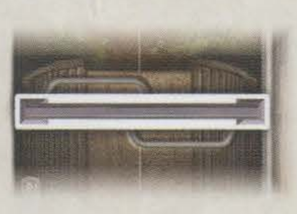
Missions within a campaign of Imperial Assault are played with information hidden from the Rebel players (often referred to as heroes). Rebel players are not allowed to read any of the information found within this Campaign Guide, but they are always allowed to ask the Imperial player to repeat any current or previous rules.

MAP DIAGRAM

The map diagram for each mission indicates assembly for the map, as well as placement of tokens, doors, and figures. It also displays information referenced by mission rules, such as named map tiles or deployment points.

Figures on the map

Deployment Point



Door

Note: Figures shown with gray and black borders both correspond to gray Deployment cards, but belong to different groups.

DEPLOYMENT AND SETUP

Each mission has a "Deployment and Setup" section that provides the list of the Imperial figures that will be present during the mission, as well as other special rules resolved during setup.

- When collecting the listed Deployment cards, figures listed in red text refer to the elite (red) version of the Deployment card, and all other figures use a regular (gray) version of the Deployment card.
- When choosing open groups, the mission may list specific groups or traits (such as Creatures) that cannot be chosen. Additionally, the Imperial player cannot choose a unique Deployment card unless it has been rewarded to him as a villain.

SPECIAL SETUP

Many missions have special setup instructions covering rules such as Rebel ally usage or token placement.

- When the rules instruct to randomly place a number of specified tokens, the Imperial player collects the listed tokens, shuffles them together, and places them facedown in the spaces indicated on the map. Until revealed by mission rules, no player is allowed to examine the facedown side of these tokens.
- When the rules instruct to choose and place a number of specified tokens, the Imperial player collects the listed tokens and places them facedown in any of the indicated spaces of his choice. Until revealed by mission rules, Rebel players are not allowed to examine the facedown side of these tokens. After the tokens are placed, they cannot be moved, but the Imperial player can examine them during the mission.

EVENT SUMMARY

Each mission has an "Event Summary" that provides a list of events that will trigger during the mission. This section is used for the Imperial player's reference only and contains abbreviated versions of event triggers. For the full timing trigger of each event, see the corresponding event in the mission text.

The information in the Event Summary is never read aloud.

MISSION EVENTS

Events form the initial structure and changing rules of a given mission. A mission can consist of any number of events starting with "Mission Briefing" and concluding with "End of Mission."

Each event can contain any combination of story text and additional rules that apply to the mission. When an event is triggered, all of the text and rule information within that section is read aloud and resolved, in order.

Mission rules are instant (▸) or ongoing (◆) effects. An instant effect is resolved immediately and most often no longer needs to be referenced. An ongoing effect applies throughout the mission and often determines special abilities granted to Rebel or Imperial figures.

- In some cases, an event will require the Imperial player to choose one of a number of effects, which can be instant or ongoing. When he chooses one, he reads the effect aloud and resolves it, but he does not read or resolve any of the unchosen effects.
- When the Imperial player deploys an initial or reserved group, this does not cost any ⚙ (threat). When a rule allows the Imperial player to resolve an optional deployment, such as during the Status Phase, he must spend ⚙ to place these figures.
- While resolving an optional deployment, the Imperial player can also reinforce figures corresponding to groups already on the map.
- Certain rules reference the mission ending or progressing, followed by the ✪ symbol. This indicates that the preceding text is an objective that the heroes are attempting to fulfill, which should be emphasized to the Rebel players by the Imperial player.

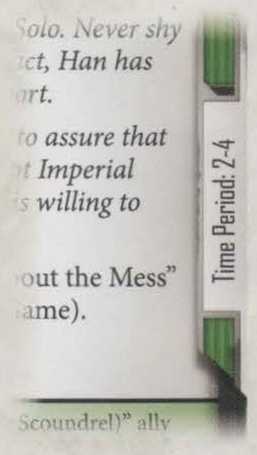
REWARDS

At the end of a mission, a number of rewards are received by the Imperial and Rebel players. Note that some rewards are received from mission results and are listed in the "End of Mission" section. Others are found in the "Additional Rewards" section, and these are received in addition to those from "End of Mission."

TIME PERIOD

Each campaign in Imperial Assault is associated with a time period, represented by a number. This corresponds to time period numbers found on certain Side Mission cards.

During campaign setup, do not use any Side Mission cards that do not include the range number associated with the campaign. For this campaign, the time period is 3, and none of the Side Mission cards contained in the core game need to be set aside.



STOP!

Only the Imperial player is allowed to read information in this guide. Rebel players are never allowed to look at or read any of the mission information beyond this page.

IMPERIAL ASSAULT

VICTORY! With the destruction of the Death Star, the Rebellion has given hope to a galaxy living in fear. Having lost their ultimate weapon, the Empire scrambles to recover in the face of this crushing defeat.

As the scattered fragments of the battle station rain down upon the Rebel base on Yavin 4, the Empire sets in motion a plan to seek retribution against Rebel forces stationed on the small moon.

Not long after, when an Imperial beacon begins to broadcast from an outpost some distance away from the Rebel base, a small team of elite operatives is dispatched; their mission: to silence the signal at all costs....

AFTERMATH

Initial Groups: Imperial Officer, Probe Droid, Stormtrooper.

Reserved Groups: E-Web Engineer, Imperial Officer, Stormtrooper.

Open Groups: None.

EVENT SUMMARY

- End of Round when door opens: Lockdown
- Round 6: End of Mission

- Door opens: Fortified
- All terminals destroyed or all heroes wounded: End of Mission

MISSION BRIEFING

Arriving at the outpost, you immediately open fire upon the troops standing guard.

You suspect they knew you were coming and that you're likely walking into an ambush. All the same, with the signal continuing to broadcast, there just isn't time for a more subtle approach.

- A Rebel figure can attack a terminal (Health: 4, Defense: 1 ▼). Apply +1 ▼ to the terminal's defense results if it is adjacent to 1 or more Imperial figures.
- Doors are locked to Imperial figures.
- The mission ends when all terminals are destroyed (), at the end of Round 6, or when all heroes are wounded.

LOCKDOWN

At the end of the Round in which the door opens for the first time:

The Imperial player chooses 1 of the following:

- Each terminal has 7 Health instead of 4.
- The door to the Atrium closes and is locked. A Rebel figure can attack the door (Health: 8, Defense: 1 black die). The red deployment point is now active.

FORTIFIED

The first time the door opens:

"They're here!" the Imperial forces shout as they scramble their defenses. "Keep them away from the transmitters!"

There's a crackle from your comlink. "Imperial forces on approach!" your pilot contacts you from your transport, now circling overhead. "The place is going to be crawling with them soon, so get the job done quick!"

- Deploy the reserved E-Web Engineer to any yellow point. That figure becomes Focused.
- Deploy the reserved Stormtrooper group and Imperial Officer to the Storage Room.

END OF MISSION

When all terminals are destroyed:

Their plans disrupted, the remaining Imperial forces fall into a hasty retreat. "Nice work!" Your pilot grins back at you as you pile into the transport.

- Place Story Mission card "A New Threat" into play. Heroes receive 100 credits per hero.

At the end of Round 6 or when all heroes are wounded:

Imperial soldiers pour out of the forest on all sides; the beacon has done its job, and you have to run. With so many of the Imperial survivors getting organized, Rebel ground troops are going to have their hands full.

- Place Story Mission card "Under Siege" into play. The Imperial player receives 1 influence.

ADDITIONAL REWARDS

- Each player receives 1 XP. Heroes receive 100 credits per hero. The Imperial player receives 1 influence.

CAPTURED

Initial Groups: Imperial Officer, Imperial Officer, Stormtrooper, Stormtrooper.

Reserved Groups: None.

Open Groups: 3.

Special Setup: Heroes cannot bring allies.

EVENT SUMMARY

- All items faceup: Escape
- Heroes depart or all heroes wounded: End of Mission

MISSION BRIEFING

You've been working for days on how to open your cell, but all of your equipment, except one well-hidden comlink, is gone.

You think it pretty hopeless until the facility shudders and the comlink crackles. "In ten seconds," a voice comes through, "the door to your cell is going to open. Your equipment is being held just down the hall. Run there... now!"

- Flip all heroes' Item cards facedown. They cannot use facedown cards. The neutral mission token represents the equipment cache. A hero can interact with the equipment cache to flip his items faceup.
- When a hero withdraws, he is incapacitated instead. When activating, he receives only 1 action and can only use that action to perform a move.
- A hero without a weapon can attack an adjacent hostile figure with 1 green and 1 yellow die. Before this attack, the hero tests . If he passes, the attack gains : +2.
- The doors in the Storage Room and Hallway are locked. A door adjacent to an Imperial figure does not block his movement or line of sight.
- The mission will progress when all heroes flip their items faceup ( ). The mission ends when all heroes are wounded.

ESCAPE

When all heroes flip their items faceup:

"I've got the ship parked near the garbage disposal," you're told by your rescuer, "but you've got to hack into their system and open the passages. Whatever you do, hurry! I'm keeping them busy, but I don't know if I can for much longer."

- Imperial mission tokens represent closed passageways and Rebel mission tokens represent open passageways. A hero can interact (or) with a terminal to flip all Imperial mission tokens of the color corresponding to that terminal.
- A figure can interact with a red Rebel mission token to place his figure in any empty space on the Trash Compactor.
- When the yellow Imperial tokens are flipped, open all doors.
- If all heroes are on or adjacent to the yellow Rebel tokens, they depart and the mission ends ( ).

When the heroes depart:

Sliding through the filth and muck, you come across other Rebel prisoners recently freed. Working together, you overpower the Imperial forces in your way. Following the instructions of your rescuer, you lead them out and pile into a transport some distance away.

When all heroes are wounded:

You're captured again and held in higher security as you're transported to Kessel. Thankfully, after a couple of weeks of hard labor, Rebel High Command launches a full-scale operation.

Rogue Squadron performs magnificently, and you are freed alongside some high-ranking rebel officers.

- The Imperial player receives 2 influence.

Initial Groups: AT-ST, E-Web Engineer, Imperial Officer, Probe Droid.

Reserved Groups: Trandoshan Hunter.

Open Groups: 3.

Special Setup: Increase ⚙ by twice the threat level and resolve an optional deployment.

EVENT SUMMARY

- Round 5: End of Mission

- AT-ST defeated: Small Victory
- 4 explosives disarmed: Last Stand
- All explosives disarmed or all heroes wounded: End of Mission

MISSION BRIEFING

"Hurry up!" Fenn barks, charging through the underbrush. Driven by singular purpose, he curses the shortsighted caution of Rebel High Command. They repeatedly denied support, saying it would be too dangerous.

"I guess it's just as well," he says, shaking his head as you continue. "Anyone else they sent would've screwed it up."

- Mission tokens represent explosives. A hero can interact with an explosive (🔧) to disarm and discard it. If the hero is Fenn or is within 3 spaces of Fenn, the figure disarms and retrieves the explosive instead.
- If an explosive is dropped, place the token Rebel side up. The explosive remains disarmed, and a Rebel figure can retrieve it.
- A hero carrying an explosive can interact with the AT-ST to place 1 explosive on the AT-ST Deployment card.
- At the end of each round, discard all explosives from the AT-ST. It suffers 5 ✖ for each token discarded.
- The mission ends when all explosives have been disarmed (🔫), at the end of Round 5, or when all heroes are wounded.

SMALL VICTORY

When the AT-ST is defeated:

The walker's husk slams into the ground with a metallic screech before detonating with a massive explosion.

- Roll 2 red dice. Each figure within 2 spaces of the defeated AT-ST suffers ✖ equal to the ✖ results.
- Deploy the reserved Trandoshan Hunter group.

LAST STAND

When 4 explosives have been disarmed:

- Increase ⚙ by the threat level. The Imperial player resolves an optional deployment.

The Imperial player chooses 1 of the following, if possible:

- Discard 1 explosive that a hero is carrying. That hero suffers 4 ✖.
- Choose a supply crate and place an explosive in a space adjacent to it.

END OF MISSION

When all explosives have been disarmed:

With the explosives removed and the advantage of the Empire eroded away, Fenn continues onward. With brutal efficiency, he cuts down any Imperial soldiers foolish enough not to flee.

- Fenn receives the "Veteran Prowess" Reward card.

At the end of Round 5 or when all heroes are wounded:

Explosions shake the ground, and fires burn all around. Fenn continues to fight, and scores of enemy soldiers fall.

Yet to no avail. The raging fire drives everyone back with unbearable heat and a choking black smoke. Retreating, Fenn can only watch as the place he bled to liberate burns.

- The Imperial player receives 2 influence.

ADDITIONAL REWARDS

- Each player receives 1 XP. Heroes receive 100 credits per hero. The Imperial player receives 1 influence.

TEMPTATION

Initial Groups: Nexu, Royal Guard, Stormtrooper.

Reserved Groups: Darth Vader (Lord of the Sith).

Open Groups: 3.

Special Setup: Place 8 Rebel mission tokens in Diala's play area. Increase ⚙ by twice the threat level and resolve an optional deployment (see "Mission Briefing").

EVENT SUMMARY

- Round 1, 3, and 5: Allure of Power

- Door to Holocron Chamber opens: Hatred
- Darth Vader defeated, Diala withdraws, or all mission tokens discarded: End of Mission

MISSION BRIEFING

A heavy mist settles about the forest as you travel in silence. A pained expression crosses Diala's features, more than just the sorrow of returning here.

There is a darkness here, all of you can feel it. As you draw near to the place where Diala's master died, ghostly figures, your foes of past and present, rise out of the mist and attack!

- Rebel mission tokens represent inner strength. During each Status Phase, Diala discards 1 Rebel mission token. Then, she tests 👁. If she fails, she discards 1 additional Rebel mission token.
- The door is locked to all figures except Diala.
- When a hero becomes wounded, Diala discards 1 Rebel mission token for each activation token that hero possesses.
- Imperial figures can deploy and reinforce to any empty space.
- The mission will progress when the door to the Holocron Chamber opens (🎲). The mission ends when Diala withdraws or has discarded all Rebel mission tokens.

ALLURE OF POWER

At the end of Rounds 1, 3, and 5:

Diala must choose 1 of the following:

- Diala discards 1 Rebel mission token and moves up to 2 spaces. Then, she performs 2 attacks.
- Diala claims 1 Rebel mission token, and each other hero within 3 spaces of her recovers 2✖ and 2✚. Then, the Imperial player chooses 1 figure to perform 1 move and 1 attack.

HATRED

When the door to the Holocron Chamber opens:

In the darkness stands the ghostly figure of Shu Yen, Diala's master. "Diala, please!" he cries. "You must come back!"

Screaming in agony, the spirit's form changes, flowing outward and taking the shape of a familiar, terrible foe. Upon seeing this, Diala releases a cry of sorrow and leaps forward to attack.

- Deploy the reserved Darth Vader to the red point.
- When Darth Vader suffers ✖ equal to twice the threat level, he is defeated and the mission ends (🎲).

END OF MISSION

When Darth Vader is defeated:

Diala pauses, kneeling before the ghostly vision of her master's killer. She whispers, "Please, master, forgive me."

At her words, the spirit vanishes and the mist sinks into the ground. The sense of darkness fades, and all that remains is an object upon the nearby pedestal.

- Diala receives the "Shu Yen's Lightsaber" Reward card.

When Diala withdraws or has discarded all Rebel mission tokens:

You all awaken some number of hours later upon the forest floor. You don't even recall falling unconscious.

The mist is gone, but an eerie sense of darkness remains. Though no one seems harmed, you cannot shake the sense that some opportunity was lost here.

- The Imperial player receives 2 influence.

ADDITIONAL REWARDS

- Each player receives 1 XP. Heroes receive 100 credits per hero. The Imperial player receives 1 influence.

DEPLOYMENT AND SETUP

Initial Groups: E-Web Engineer, Imperial Officer, Nexu, Stormtrooper.

Reserved Groups: Trandoshan Hunter, Trandoshan Hunter.

Open Groups: 3.

Special Setup: Increase ⚙ by twice the threat level and resolve an optional deployment. Jyn Odan does not deploy with the heroes and instead is deployed as shown.

EVENT SUMMARY

- Jyn calls Szark out: The Gunfight
- Szark defeated or all heroes wounded: End of Mission

MISSION BRIEFING

Hiding in cover, you wait for Szark to show himself. "It's apparently his moon. He's bound to come eventually." Jyn swears, scowling. Your wait is quite long.

"There he is," Jyn says, pointing. Down the street, Szark walks out of the cantina, over to the small group of Imperial troops. "Working another deal, huh? What, one moon wasn't enough?"

Before you can stop her, Jyn leaps out of cover and sprints forward, firing her blaster. Szark's eyes go wide, and he scrambles away. He ducks into his personal cantina, slamming the door shut as blaster bolts sizzle past his head.

You're a few steps behind Jyn as Szark's mercenary and Imperial allies draw their weapons.

- The door is locked.
- The Rebel mission token represents a comlink. Jyn can interact with the comlink to call out Szark.
- The mission will progress when Jyn calls out Szark (✪). The mission ends when all heroes are wounded.

THE GUNFIGHT

When Jyn calls out Szark:

The door to the cantina slowly opens and a thin Trandoshan saunters out.

"My, my," he growls, smiling. "Jyn Odan. Never thought I'd see the day." His hand slides down toward his holstered blaster.

- Open the door.
- Deploy 1 of the reserved Trandoshan Hunter figures to the yellow point. Deploy 1 of the reserved Trandoshan Hunter figures at each of the red points.
- Jyn tests 👁. If she passes, she interrupts to perform an attack targeting Szark. Otherwise, Szark interrupts to perform an attack targeting Jyn (see below).

◆ The Trandoshan Hunter is Szark. His group size is reduced to 1. Apply additional Health equal to twice the threat level to Szark. Apply +2 Accuracy to his attack results, and he gains ↝: +2✖.

◆ When Szark activates, the Imperial player may spend 2⚙ for Szark to recover ✖ equal to the threat level.

◆ At the start of each round, the Imperial player may spend 2⚙ for Szark to recover ✖ equal to the threat level.

◆ The mission ends when Szark is defeated (✪).

END OF MISSION

When Szark is defeated:

Wounded, Szark scrambles around the corner. Jyn follows, and you hear an exchange of blaster fire, then silence.

Not long after, she reemerges, holstering her weapon. "Let's go," she says, not looking back.

- Jyn Odan receives the "Peacemaker" Reward card.

When all heroes are wounded:

Shouting, Jyn jumps out of cover, trying to squeeze off a few more shots. Three blaster bolts catch her in the chest, and she falls. In a fighting retreat, you drag her barely alive body back to the ship.

"Until next time, Jyn..." a transmission comes in. "You'll have to visit again soon!" Szark gives a long, mocking laugh, making you glad that she's unconscious.

- The Imperial player receives 2 influence.

ADDITIONAL REWARDS

- Each player receives 1 XP. Heroes receive 100 credits per hero. The Imperial player receives 1 influence.

INDEBTED

Initial Groups: Nexu, Stormtrooper.

Reserved Groups: E-Web Engineer.

Open Groups: 3.

Special Setup: Increase ⚙ by twice the threat level and resolve an optional deployment.

EVENT SUMMARY

- Round 6: End of Mission

- Door opens: Prison Guards
- 2 pulse cannons discarded: Divert Power
- Shortatha rescued or all heroes wounded: End of Mission

MISSION BRIEFING

Gaarkhan lets out a soft growl as you approach the small series of buildings. Several guards and sentry weapons are present, and the hum of machinery fills the air. A few prisoners mill around, hauling equipment, but many are escorted to cells. You don't see any Wookiees. The one you're looking for, Shortatha, must be in a holding cell somewhere nearby.

- The door is locked. A hero can interact with a terminal (🔧 or 🔧) to disable it and claim the token. When all terminals are disabled, the door opens.
- Imperial mission tokens represent pulse cannons; at the end of each round, each one will fire upon a hero. When this happens, the Imperial player chooses a hero in line of sight of that cannon and rolls 1 red and 1 yellow die. That hero suffers ✖ equal to the ✖ results. If that hero is Gaarkhan, he becomes Focused.
- A hero can interact with a pulse cannon (2 🔧) to disable and discard it.
- The Rebel mission token represents Shortatha. A hero can interact with Shortatha to rescue him.
- The mission ends when Shortatha is rescued (🔧), at the end of Round 6, or when all heroes are wounded.

PRISON GUARDS

When the door opens:

Seeing your advancement through their fellow guards, stormtroopers in front of the main prison area charge out, setting up a heavy blaster emplacement.

- Deploy the reserved E-Web Engineer to the yellow point.

DIVERT POWER

When 2 pulse cannons have been disabled:

Prison officers run back and forth, shouting frantic orders to the guards. One reaches the compound's intercom system. "Rebel troops are advancing! Divert power to the remaining pulse cannon, and stop them, you fools!"

- Increase ⚙ by the threat level.
- For the rest of the mission, when the pulse cannon fires, roll 2 red dice instead of 1 red and 1 yellow die.

END OF MISSION

When Shortatha is rescued:

As you blast the restraints from Shortatha's limbs, he roars and charges the remaining stormtroopers in the base. Gaarkhan follows along, releasing other captives in the wake of his rampaging comrade.

- Gaarkhan receives the "Life Debt" Reward card.

At the end of Round 6 or when all heroes are wounded:

The defenses are too thick, and you are forced to pull back. As the shuttle picks you up at the extraction point, Gaarkhan gives a low growl of sorrow; his brother's life debt remains unfulfilled.

- The Imperial player receives 2 influence.

ADDITIONAL REWARDS

- Each player receives 1 XP. Heroes receive 100 credits per hero. The Imperial player receives 1 influence.

MISSION BRIEFING

You're concerned with Mak's obsession with destroying this facility. He still hasn't told you what sort of importance it holds, but his attitude is quite volatile.

That is, until you arrive in the main hangar of the facility and he spots an unmanned scout walker.

- The AT-ST is a Rebel figure under Mak's control. When Mak activates, ready and activate the AT-ST. Mak's hero figure is not deployed and cannot activate. Apply additional Health equal to the threat level to the AT-ST. The AT-ST can enter and occupy spaces on the Hangar.
- The wall between the Hangar and Testing Grounds does not block movement or line of sight.
- The mission ends when all Imperial figures have been defeated (), at the end of Round 7, or when all heroes are wounded.

CHAOS

At the end of Round 1:

- Deploy the reserved E-Web Engineer.

PRESS THE ADVANTAGE

When the AT-ST is defeated:

Shouting curses, Mak dives out of the top of the walker as it continues to be assailed from all sides.

Mak hits the ground hard. He rises to his feet as his tactical advantage detonates, sending him sprawling once more.

- Place Mak's figure in one of the spaces that was occupied by the AT-ST. He suffers 10.

The Imperial player chooses 1 of the following:

END OF MISSION

- Mak Eshka'rey receives the "Shadow Suit" Reward card.

At the end of Round 7 or when all heroes are wounded:

"Not again!" Mak shouts, trying to push forward even as you drag him away and depart the planet. With smoldering anger, Mak crouches in the corner of the hold, muttering "Next time..." over and over under his breath.

- The Imperial player receives 2 influence.

ADDITIONAL REWARDS

DEPLOYMENT AND SETUP

Initial Groups: Imperial Officer, Stormtrooper.

Reserved Groups: Imperial Officer, Probe Droid, Stormtrooper.

MISSION BRIEFING

Rumors of the traitor have proven true. You arrive in the system under attack, barely able to disengage from Imperial fighters. You're safely dropped off near the rendezvous point.

Imperial forces crawl throughout the area; there are no signs of Gideon's former comrades.

- Neutral mission tokens represent hidden rebels. A hero can interact with a mission token (👁) to reveal that token and replace it with a Rebel Trooper figure. Heroes control Rebel Troopers as allies.
- Apply additional Health equal to the threat level to each Rebel Trooper. A Rebel Trooper cannot use more than 1 action to perform a move during each activation.
- A Rebel Trooper can escape through the entrance.
- At the end of each round, starting with Round 4, the Imperial player chooses and reveals 1 mission token, and replaces it with a Rebel Trooper. This figure suffers ✖ equal to the threat level and is Stunned.
- The mission ends when 2 Rebel Troopers have escaped (🏃), when 2 Rebel Troopers have been defeated, or when all heroes are wounded.

THE SQUAD

Each time a mission token is revealed:

Resolve the following based on the color of the revealed token:

The door slides open and the officer looks up in alarm. "Han? What are you doing here?" Han smiles. "Hey there, Gerrin. I heard you bought yourself a military commission. I'm just here to congratulate you." He raises his blaster.

- Deploy the reserved Imperial Officer to the yellow point.
- Increase ⚙ by the threat level. The Imperial player resolves an optional deployment to the red point.
- The Imperial Officer is Gerrin. Apply additional Health equal to twice the threat level to Gerrin.
- The mission ends when Gerrin is defeated (🏃).
- Han may interrupt to perform an attack targeting Gerrin.

The Imperial player chooses 1 of the following:

- Gerrin becomes Focused and may interrupt to perform 1 move and 1 attack.
- Deploy the reserved E-Web Engineer to the red point.

END OF MISSION

When Gerrin is defeated:

"No hard feelings for Nar Shadaa," Han says sarcastically. He turns to you, smiling. "Thanks guys, I owe you one. If you ever find yourself in a tight spot, maybe I can repay the favor."

- Heroes receive Han Solo (Scoundrel) as an ally.

When Han solo is defeated:

Han ducks as a volley of blaster fire sizzles overhead. "Huh," he says, firing back. "Didn't think there'd be so many."

Imperials continue to press forward; before long you disengage, unable to handle their sheer numbers.

- The Imperial player receives 2 influence.

MISSION BRIEFING

You receive a call from Luke when you draw near to his safe house. "Finally. I was starting to think no one would come."

Imperial forces swarm throughout the farmstead, and it seems your arrival is rather timely.

"My transport is inside the garage," Luke tells you, waving to you through a window as you approach.

- Doors are locked. Luke Skywalker can interact with the terminal to open all doors.
- Apply additional health to Luke Skywalker equal to twice the threat level.
- The mission will progress when the doors to the Garage are opened (🌀). The mission ends at the end of Round 6 or when Luke Skywalker is defeated.

THE DARK LORD

When the doors to the Garage open:

The doors to the garage slide open, revealing more than just Luke's T-16.

A squad of Imperial stormtroopers is deployed inside with blasters raised, ready and waiting to capture the Rebellion's hero.

You see the terrifying outline of Darth Vader standing tall among the soldiers. With one hand he activates his lightsaber and with the other he points at you and Luke, indicating to his troops to begin their attack.

- Deploy the reserved Darth Vader to the red point.
- Deploy the reserved Stormtrooper group to the Garage.
- The adjacent blocked spaces on the Garage form a T-16 Skyhopper. If there are 2 or fewer Imperial figures on the Garage, Luke Skywalker can interact with the T-16 to escape, ending the mission (🌀).

END OF MISSION

When Luke Skywalker escapes:

The T-16 rockets into the air, twisting and weaving to evade the fire of the ground forces. Eager to get off-world, you hurry back to your ship as a message comes through:

"Thanks, that was a close one," Luke says, relief in his voice. "I owe you one."

- Heroes receive Luke Skywalker (Hero of the Rebellion) as an ally.

MISSION BRIEFING

A Weequay stands guard in the alley outside the storehouse, confirming that you're at the right place. As you walk up, he glares, placing a hand on his blaster.

With a roar, Chewbacca charges forward. He seizes the surprised guard and slams him into the door, over and over, until it smashes inward.

Dropping the unconscious and battered Weequay, he steps inside, and you follow.

- Doors are locked. A Rebel figure carrying the keycard can open doors.
- The yellow neutral mission token is the keycard. After an Imperial figure with a neutral mission token is defeated, place the token in its space facedown without revealing it. A Rebel figure can interact with the token to reveal and retrieve it.
- Imperial mission tokens represent spice barrels. A healthy hero or Chewbacca can interact with a spice barrel (⚙) to claim the token.
- The mission ends when all of the spice has been claimed (⚙), at the end of Round 5, or when all heroes are wounded and Chewbacca is defeated.

DEFEND THE SPICE

The first time the keycard is retrieved:

The Imperial player chooses 1 of the following:

- Increase ⚙ by the threat level.
- Interrupt to perform an attack with an Imperial figure.

THE BACK ROOM

The first time a door to the Spice Room opens:

You're immediately assaulted by the stinging aroma of spice. A blaster emplacement swivels toward you, a last line of defense to protect the greater portions of the stash.

- Deploy the reserved E-Web Engineer to the yellow point.

The Imperial player chooses 1 of the following:

- Increase ⚙ by the threat level.

- Heroes receive Chewbacca (Loyal Wookiee) as an ally.

At the end of Round 5, or when all heroes are wounded and Chewbacca is defeated:

EVENT SUMMARY

- Round 6: End of mission

- Door to the Cell opens: Finish the Job
- Door to Archive opens: Data Core
- Data core destroyed or all heroes wounded: End of Mission

MISSION BRIEFING

It seems you arrived too late for your saboteur associates. They foolishly attempted the mission without you and now sit rotting in a cell.

Your new mission is to rescue them, or at the very least finish the job. Fortunately, they're being held relatively close to their original objective; it occurs to you that they may have incorporated this as part of their plan.

- Doors are locked. A hero can interact with the terminal (2 ⚙) to unlock the door to the Cell. A Rebel figure can attack the door to the Archive (Health: 8, Defense: 5 ➤).
- Rebel Saboteurs are neutral figures until the door to the Cell opens.
- The neutral mission token is the data core. A Rebel figure can attack the data core (Health: 6, Defense: None).
- The mission ends when the data core is destroyed (✪), at the end of Round 6, or when all heroes are wounded.

FINISH THE JOB

When the door to the Cell opens:

Without speaking, the operatives glance down, seeing some of their equipment in your hands. As they reach for it, one cocks his head slightly in question.

You nod, telling them that there's no reason why the job can't still be done.

- Rebel Saboteurs are now Rebel figures. Heroes control the Rebel Saboteurs as allies at no threat cost.
- When a Rebel Saboteur is defeated, he is incapacitated instead. When activating, he receives only 1 action.
- While a non-incapacitated Rebel Saboteur is attacking the door, apply +1 ↝ to the attack results.

DATA CORE

When the door to the Archive opens:

- Deploy the reserved Royal Guard group to the red point. The Imperial player can spend 2⚙. If he does, each Royal Guard may interrupt to perform 1 move and 1 attack.

END OF MISSION

When the data core is destroyed:

Leaving the smoldering fragments of the data core scattered throughout the archive, you depart. Soon after, a message arrives from the saboteurs. Grateful for the assistance, they offer their service should you need it. Though they use unorthodox methods, you're pleased to have capable demolitionists at your disposal.

- Heroes receive the Rebel Saboteurs as allies.

At the end of Round 6 or when all heroes are wounded:

Imperial forces close in, and it seems more prudent to depart.

- The Imperial player receives 2 influence.

- Figure escapes or all heroes wounded: End of Mission

MISSION BRIEFING

"Uh, can you guys hurry up? I'm in some trouble here..." Jarl's last transmission came in hours before, his voice weak.

Now, Imperial forces crawl throughout this area, likely searching for the very thing you came to retrieve.

Repeated attempts to contact Jarl prove fruitless, but you're getting close to the meeting place. Unfortunately, so are Imperial forces, who have surrounded the structure and are working at the doors with cutting equipment.

- The mission token represents a memory core inside a broken droid. Any figure can retrieve the data core.
- A figure carrying the memory core can escape through the entrance.
- Doors are locked. Any figure can attack a door (Health: 8, Defense: None).
- The mission ends when a figure carrying the memory core escapes or when all heroes are wounded.

FIND THE DROID

The first time a door opens:

Sunlight spills into a musty junk shop, unoccupied save for a large collection of worthless trinkets. A half-dismantled probe droid lies discarded on the floor.

Pinpricks of light shine through small holes scattered throughout the walls, presumably from blaster fire.

A small distance away lies the facedown body of Weyn Jarl, bearing several blaster wounds. It appears he barricaded himself in, but the structure proved unsuitable for hiding.

Another door bursts inward, and Imperials flood inside.

- Deploy the reserved Imperial Officer and Stormtrooper group to the yellow point.

END OF MISSION

When a Rebel figure carrying the data core escapes:

With blaster bolts whining overhead and the droid's data core in hand, you make a quick retreat. If someone back at High Command can crack the encryption on this, it'll definitely come in handy.

- Rebel players choose 1 hero to receive the "Rebel Recon" Reward card.

When an Imperial figure carrying the data core escapes or when all heroes are wounded:

You lose sight of the individual carrying the data core down an alley. Trying to catch up while fighting other Imperial forces, eventually you come to a dead end.

- Formula retrieved: Sound the Alarms
- Hero escapes or all heroes wounded: End of Mission

MISSION BRIEFING

Standing at the cliff edge, you can see the facility down below. With a few guards lingering outside, the facility doesn't appear quite as abandoned as advertised. Investigating it might be more difficult than you anticipated, but it should still be manageable.

- Doors are locked. A hero can interact with a terminal (🔧 or 🔧) to open the door closest to the terminal.
- The neutral mission token represents the formula. A hero can retrieve the formula.
- A hero carrying the formula can escape through the entrance.
- The mission ends when a hero carrying the formula escapes (🏃) or when all heroes are wounded.

LIGHTLY GUARDED

The first time the first door opens:

Dust covers the floor in this room, empty save for a group of Imperial soldiers who quickly take cover and begin firing.

- Deploy the reserved Imperial Officer and Stormtrooper group to the Command Room.

TOO QUIET

The first time the door to the Hangar opens:

A large receiving bay lies before you, clearly disused. Shelves of miscellaneous items are lined up throughout the area. Though the organization system is a bit lacking, at least everything is labeled.

SOUND THE ALARMS

The first time a hero retrieves the formula:

Flashing red light fills the hangar bay, while a blaring alarm sounds throughout the facility.

With the formula in hand, you turn toward the exit with thoughts of a hasty retreat. You manage to take two steps before the door snaps shut with a loud clang.

- Close all doors.
- Increase ⚙ by twice the threat level.
- The red deployment points are now active.

When a hero carrying the formula escapes:

Dozens of stormtroopers pour out of the supposedly abandoned facility, but you're long gone before anyone picks up your trail. You send a polite message to your contact, emphasizing precisely how not abandoned the facility actually was.

- Rebel players choose one hero to receive the "Adrenal Implant" Reward card.

When all heroes are wounded:

You curse the name of whatever idiot gave the intelligence about this facility being abandoned. What seems like a legion of Imperial troops begins to respond to a deafening alarm.

Dozens run out of the facility in pursuit of you, far more motivated in the chase than you'd have expected.

COMMAND ROOM 23A

MISSION BRIEFING

It sickens you a little to work with criminals, but it seems worth it to steal from the Empire and fund the Rebellion.

"Just stick this in the main computer and it'll take care of the rest." Your contact hands you a data crystal. "You'll have to stick around to let the transfer run." She gives a nasty grin. "Just don't expect the security response to be gentle."

- Doors are locked. Any figure can attack a door (Health: 5, Defense: 1 ▼).
- A Rebel figure can interact with a terminal (🔊) to upload the virus.
- The mission will progress when the virus is uploaded (Ⓡ). The mission ends at the end of Round 8 or when all heroes are wounded.

CLEAR THE AREA

The first time a door opens:

- The red deployment point is now active. The green deployment points are now inactive.
- ▸ Deploy the reserved E-Web Engineer and Royal Guard group to the Command Room.

THE VIRUS

When the virus is uploaded:

It's hard to tell if the siphoning software has kicked in until a deafening alarm blares within the complex and surrounding grounds. External cameras show a fair number of guards responding.

- ▸ Deploy the reserved AT-ST and Stormtrooper group to the yellow point. Increase ⚙ by the threat level and close all doors (including destroyed doors).
- A door adjacent to a Rebel figure does not block his movement or line of sight.
- If there is not a healthy Rebel figure within 2 spaces of a terminal, an Imperial figure can interact with that terminal to disable and discard it.
- At the end of each round, heroes claim 1 neutral mission token for each terminal on the map. Then, increase ⚙ by the threat level.
- The mission ends when the heroes have claimed 12 mission tokens (Ⓡ) or when all terminals have been disabled.

END OF MISSION

At the end of Round 8, when the heroes have claimed 12 mission tokens, when all terminals have been disabled, or when all heroes are wounded:

With the continuing intensity of response, you deem it best to make your departure and secure your new finances.

It seems the proportions were a little different than you were promised. There is very little remaining in the account, the rest of it drawn away.

MISSION BRIEFING

With a soft click, you open the panel and climb into the main body of the ship. After crawling through sewer and maintenance decks for the better part of a day, you're glad to be out.

The ship isn't too heavily defended, nor is the hangar in which it sits. Should be an easy theft.

- Doors are locked to heroes. A hero can interact with a door (or) to open it.
- At the end of each round, if 1 or more Rebel figures are the only figures adjacent to a terminal, it is secured. Discard the token.
- The mission ends when all terminals are secured ( ) or when all heroes are wounded.

SOUND THE ALARM

At the end of each Round:

The Imperial player chooses 1 of the following:

- Close 1 door.
- Perform 1 attack with 1 Imperial figure.

SECURE THE SHIP

At the end of Round 2:

Alarms ring throughout the ship. Some distance away, you can hear the soft clang and whirring of a lift arriving and its doors opening. It sounds like you have more company.

- Deploy the reserved Royal Guard group.

DESPERATION

Each time a terminal is secured:

MISSION BRIEFING

You arrive at a quiet little test factory. You've been informed that it will significantly increase the efficiency of Imperial efforts if its construction is completed.

Three other teams have apparently tried and failed to sabotage the factory. Their reports suggest some sort of reactive defense protocols.

- Doors are locked. A hero can attack a door (Health: Twice the threat level, Defense: 1 ▼).
- The Imperial mission token is the data core. A Rebel figure can interact with the data core to destroy it.
- The mission ends when the data core is destroyed (✪), at the end of Round 5, or when all heroes are wounded.

GUARDED

As you break through the first door, you're assailed by a deafening mechanical grinding. Ahead, you see heavy shielding slide over the next door.

- The red deployment points are now active.
- Deploy the reserved E-Web Engineer to the yellow point.
- Resolve "Reactive Defenses."

REACTIVE DEFENSES

At the end of each Round and the first time a door to the Hangar opens:

- The Imperial player places a neutral mission token of his choice faceup near any door and resolves an effect based on the color of the token:

Blue: Apply additional Health equal to twice the threat level to the door.

Red: When this door opens, increase ◎ by the threat level.

Green: After an attack targeting this door resolves, the attacker suffers 2 ✖.

Yellow: When this door opens, each hero within 5 spaces tests ⚄. Each hero who fails is Stunned.

END OF MISSION

When the data core is destroyed:

As the core is destroyed, the escalating defense protocols disengage. The alarms die down, and the lights go black.

If the Empire wants to use this facility for something, it'll be quite some time before they can get it up and running.

- Heroes receive 100 credits per hero.

At the end of Round 5 or when all heroes are wounded:

MISSION BRIEFING

You arrive at a Rebel safe house where crucial supplies are being stored. You've been there a few minutes when the door explodes inward. Imperials rush in, and blaster fire fills the air.

- Rebel mission tokens represent supply caches. An Imperial figure can attack a supply cache (Health: Twice the threat level, Defense: ▼ equal to the number of adjacent Rebel figures).
- Neutral mission tokens represent barricades. Barricades are impassible terrain.
- Doors are locked. An Imperial figure can attack a door (Health: 5, Defense: 1 ▼).

- The Imperial player receives the first activation each round.
- The mission ends at the end of Round 5 (🏆), when 5 supply caches are destroyed, or when all heroes are wounded.
- Heroes control the Rebel Troopers as allies at no cost.

LEAVE NO SURVIVORS

At the end of Round 1:

Striding through the blasted-open entrance is a Royal Guard in black armor with red trim. Since you don't often hear of these guards in non-defensive operations, you assume this individual is someone special.

- Deploy the reserved Royal Guard Champion.
- Instead of activating as normal, the Royal Guard Champion performs 1 action after each hero activation.

ARTILLERY SUPPORT

Once at the end of Round 2, 3, or 4:

The Imperial player chooses 1 of the following:

With a few barked commands from their leader, the attackers disengage.

- Heroes receive 100 credits per hero.

MISSION BRIEFING

While refueling your ship, you were taken into custody on suspicion of criminal activity. All of your documentation was up-to-date. Though you considered blasting everything in sight, your pilot assured you that he could talk his way out of it.

That was three hours ago, so you decide to sneak out of the waiting room. After a few minutes of looking around, you arrive in an observation area just in time to see your pilot thrown into an animal pen. Fearsome beasts prowl around, baring razor-sharp teeth at his unconscious form.

- The terminal represents docking clamp controls. A hero can interact with the docking clamp controls (🔧 or 👁) to deactivate them and discard the token.
- The Rebel mission token is the pilot. A hero can retrieve the pilot. Apply -1 to the Speed and -1 ▼ to the defense results of a hero carrying the pilot.
- The mission will progress when the docking clamp controls have been deactivated and the pilot has been retrieved (🏃). The mission ends at the end of Round 5 or when all heroes are wounded.

PREP FOR TAKEOFF

When the docking clamp controls have been deactivated and the pilot has been retrieved:

In pretty bad shape, your pilot slowly awakens. You fill him in on the situation.

"Okay, with the docking clamps released, all we need to do is get to the ship." He winces, holding his wounded side. "Oh, they are going to pay for this…" he says through clenched teeth.

- Increase ⚙ by the threat level. The Imperial player resolves an optional deployment.
- Place the green neutral mission token on the blue point. This represents the hatch.
- A hero carrying the pilot can interact with the hatch for the pilot to depart, ending the mission (🏃).

END OF MISSION

When the pilot departs:

The pilot is a bit overzealous as he showers the area in blaster cannon fire before setting the ship down. His face is grim, and he says nothing but a curt, "Thanks," as everyone climbs into the transport.

At the end of Round 5 or when all heroes are wounded:

You scramble out into the desert, keenly aware that the Imperials are now ripping your ship apart, piece by piece.

Everything that was on your ship—flight records, messages, the positions of key operatives—will soon be in their hands.

- The mission will progress when the door to the Office opens (🔫). The mission ends at the end of Round 6 or when all heroes are wounded.

HUNTED DOWN

When the door to the Office opens:

- Deploy the reserved IG-88 to the red point and the Probe Droid to the yellow point. Then, increase ⚙ by the threat level.
- The door to the Store Room is now unlocked.
- A hero can interact with the terminal (🔧) to open the door to the exit. At the end of each Round, the door to the exit closes.
- Imperial mission tokens are barricades. Barricades are blocking terrain and can be attacked (Health: Three times the threat level, Defense: 1▼).
- The red deployment point is now active.
- The Rebel mission token represents the exit. When all heroes are on or adjacent to the exit, the heroes depart, ending the mission (🔫).

When the heroes depart:

Breaking through the barricades, you clear a path. Out in the open, you're able to deal with any other hunters trying to claim their share as you get back to your ship.

At the end of Round 6 or when all heroes are wounded:

You're very near to breaking free when one of your assailants, whom you thought was incapacitated, pulls out a thermal detonator. He screams something in an alien tongue as you dive behind whatever cover you can find.

You claw your way free of the wreckage, badly hurt, and signal for extraction. Some of you are more hurt than others, but all told you're lucky to be alive.

- The Imperial player receives the "Old Wounds" Reward card.

MISSION BRIEFING

You've been sent to investigate a facility under the command of General Weiss. Imperial presence in the sector is heavy, but a timely diversion from another team gives you the opening to sneak in. It's an odd place, lacking the crisp organization you expect from the Empire.

Even with the diversion, it won't take long for you to attract attention. You've been advised to make your stay as quick and efficient as possible.

- Doors are locked to Rebel figures. A Rebel figure can attack a door (Health: 5, Defense: 1 ▼).
- A hero can interact with a terminal to flip the token color side faceup and perform an attribute test based on the color. If he passes, that terminal is investigated. The colors and their corresponding tests are as follows:

Red: 2 Blue: 2 Green: 2

- The mission ends when all terminals are investigated (), at the end of Round 7, or when all heroes are wounded.

ARRIVAL

At the end of Round 5:

Out of the foliage bursts a bipedal scout walker unlike any you've ever seen. The terrifying vehicle bristles with weaponry.

"Rebel forces!" an amplified voice issues from the monstrous walker. "This is General Vitsun Weiss of the Imperial Army. You are surrounded and severely outgunned. Surrender and I swear mercy shall be granted!"

- Deploy the reserved General Weiss to the yellow point.

DEFENSE PROTOCOLS

Each time a door opens:

The Imperial player chooses 1 of the following, limit once per option:

- Each hero within 3 spaces of the door tests . Each hero who fails is Stunned.
- Increase by 6.
- Each Probe Droid may perform 1 move and 1 attack.
- Place the reserved Nexu on an interior space within 3 spaces of the opened door.

REVELATION

When the red terminal is investigated:

The ceiling has collapsed here, burying the vicinity in rubble. With substantial effort, you dig through it and find a terminal. By some minor miracle, it still functions and even contains useful data.

It would seem the purpose of this outpost had been research and development, since much of the data relates to engineering, prototype assault craft, armor, and weapons. Messages from General Weiss are throughout, and it's clear that he's involved in many aspects of all listed projects.

When the blue terminal is investigated:

Data spools across the archaic device, a log filled with miscellaneous engineering data. As you spend some time digging through it, you notice entries describing several shipments to this area. Miscellaneous scrap, power supplies, a few weapons, but what catches your attention is how the pieces fit together.

You surmise that this section of the facility was used to build or modify a vehicle of some kind. Something very different from standard Imperial design.

When the green terminal is investigated:

The computer in this room is in substantial disrepair; after a bit of coaxing, it flickers to life. Described within are a plenitude of prototype engineering projects, but one weapon project in particular seems of obvious importance.

Details appear deliberately vague, but there is a lot of communication surrounding the subject. There's also a sense of gravity associated with the project, making the information difficult to ignore.

END OF MISSION

When all terminals have been investigated:

The job finished, you make a hasty retreat out into the surrounding forest and signal for pickup. Your departure is rather timely, and as you fly away, you see a substantial number of Imperial troops converging on the facility.

"Nicely done," your commander congratulates you upon your return. "Techs are tearing apart the data you obtained. Though they have not finished their analysis, there is a lot of concern about this new weapon project."

"Be ready for another operation soon," she warns, "as we're going to be aggressively pursuing any leads we can."

- Place Story Mission card "Imperial Hospitality" into play. Each hero receives 1 XP.

At the end of Round 7 or when all heroes are wounded:

Though the mission isn't complete, you can't possibly see a way to punch through the Imperial forces continuing to fire upon your position. Only through a risky and foolish rescue maneuver from your pilot are you able to make your escape.

From the little information you were able to find, Alliance High Command has discovered rumors of a new weapon under the development of General Weiss. Nothing more is known thus far, but at least the mission wasn't a complete failure.

- Place Story Mission card "Fly Solo" into play. The Imperial player receives 1 XP.

ADDITIONAL REWARDS

- Each player receives 1 XP in addition to any that he already received. Heroes receive 100 credits per hero. The Imperial player receives 1 influence.
- If the heroes have investigated all terminals before the end of Round 5, they receive an additional 100 credits per hero. Otherwise, the Imperial player receives 1 influence.

MISSION BRIEFING

Command has assigned you a brutally simple task: you're to cause a diversion, allowing another team to investigate a facility under Weiss's control.

The instructions from your commander were clear. "Don't jam or cut off any signals," she told you. "If they send any calls for help, good. If they don't, then you didn't make enough noise."

Considering the sheer amount of Imperial weight now bearing down on the compound, you certainly succeeded in "making enough noise."

After removing the Imperial presence from the facility, you made preparations to defend it. Many of the doors are sealed off, barricaded against the possibility of troops coming in through another entrance. You're expecting they'll try, but hopefully your hasty fortifications will hold long enough to keep their numbers manageable.

- Mission tokens represent capture sites. At the end of each round, if an Imperial figure occupies a tile with a capture site and there are no healthy Rebel figures on that tile, that site is secured by the Imperial player and he claims its token.
- Doors are locked. An Imperial figure can attack a door (Health: 6, Defense: 1 black die).
- A door adjacent to a Rebel figure does not block his movement or line of sight.
- The mission ends at the end of Round 8 (), when the Imperial player secures 4 capture sites, or when all heroes are forced to withdraw.

▸ Rebel players deploy their figures to any interior space.

WAVE 1

At the end of Round 2:

For every troop you cut down, it seems as though three more take its place. Though the pressure continues to mount, the base is still under your control for the time being.

▸ Deploy the reserved Royal Guard group and increase by 5.

ASSAULT

At the end of Round 3:

The Imperial player chooses 1 of the following:

▸ Remove 1 door from the map and roll 1 red die. Each hero within 3 spaces of that door suffers equal to the results.

▸ Increase by 3.

WAVE 2

At the end of Round 4:

The pressure rises with each passing moment, but you're informed through your comlink that the other strike team is nearly finished.

A detonation resounds through the corridors, originating from somewhere within the compound. It was only a matter of time before they tried to get in another way, but you curse your luck all the same. You just hope the explosion doesn't mean they already breached the compound and are flooding inside.

▸ Deploy the reserved Stormtrooper group and increase by 3.

SPECIALISTS

At the end of Round 5:

The Imperial player chooses 1 of the following:

▸ Deploy the reserved AT-ST to any yellow point.

▸ Resolve an optional deployment of 1 group (no reinforcements) to the red point. This group may activate before the heroes during the next round.

WAVE 3

At the end of Round 6:

You can hardly believe it, but striding through the field of fallen troops is the imposing, terrifying figure of Darth Vader himself.

A comlink message tells you that the other team is on its way out. Even though your job is done, you know a few more minutes of diversion could make a world of difference to your comrades.

▸ Deploy the reserved Darth Vader and increase by 3.

END OF MISSION

At the end of Round 8:

Even though the call came for you to pull back several minutes ago, you still held in spite of the overwhelming odds.

You're told later that the few extra minutes meant clear skies for the other team's escape. Your pilot wasn't thrilled about the enemy fighters that came to deal with you, but it still worked out.

The recon team's success has revealed a new weapon project under Weiss's development, and their findings suggest that this should be of great concern to the Rebellion.

▸ Place Story Mission card "Imperial Hospitality" into play. Each hero receives 1 XP. The heroes receive 100 credits per hero.

When 4 capture points have been secured or when all heroes withdraw:

Imperial forces charge into the compound, and you're unable to hold them back any longer. Hoping the time you bought the other strike team will be enough, you quickly disengage.

Luck is on your side; after you're extracted, a transmission arrives from your commander. She makes no mention of your efforts and instead focuses entirely on the findings of the other team. "Weiss is developing a weapon," she tells you, "and High Command is very nervous about it. They're already clamoring for more information, so don't be surprised if you're called on soon."

▸ If 4 capture points were secured before the end of Round 6, Place Story Mission card "Fly Solo" into play. The Imperial player receives 1 XP and 1 influence.

Otherwise, Place Story Mission card "Imperial Hospitality" into play. Each player receives 1 XP.

ADDITIONAL REWARDS

▸ Each player receives 1 XP in addition to any that he already received. Heroes receive 100 credits per hero. The Imperial player receives 1 influence.

IMPERIAL HOSPITALITY

MISSION BRIEFING

"He's alive, for now." The transmission from Command came through regarding the operative captured a few days earlier, "He's going to be held for a couple of days in a facility near Thyferra before they transfer him to Coruscant."

You're also told that he was carrying a sensitive data packet that included positioning of Rebel operatives throughout the galaxy, including yourselves. Heavily encrypted, of course, but only a matter of time to crack it with the resources at the Empire's disposal.

You recall the final instructions of your commander as you crawl through cave networks and ventilation shafts. "Keeping that information out of the Empire's hands is very important, but the operative is your top priority."

- Doors are locked. A Rebel figure can attack a door (Health: 6, Defense: 1 black die) or interact (2).
- The terminal will transmit sensitive data at the end of Round 4. A Rebel figure can attack the terminal (Health: 6, Defense: 1 black die) or interact (2) to destroy it.
- The mission token represents the captive. The captive is a neutral figure until the door to the Cell opens.
- The mission will progress when the door to the Cell opens ( ). The mission ends when all heroes are wounded.

TRANSMISSION RECEIVED

At the end of Round 4, if the terminal has not been destroyed:

"Excellent," a voice says though the facility's communication system. "The data transfer is complete. The prisoner is no longer necessary. Please dispose of him."

- The red deployment points are now active.
- Open all doors.
- Discard the terminal.
- If "Well-Guarded" has not been resolved, resolve "Well-Guarded."
- If "The Prisoner" has not been resolved, resolve "The Prisoner."

WELL-GUARDED

The first time a door to the Data Center opens:

"Will someone remove this Rebel scum from my facility?" The voice comes through the comm system. "Don't just stand there, you fools, get them!"

- Deploy the reserved Imperial Officer and Trandoshan Hunter group to the Data Center.

THE PRISONER

When the door to the Cell opens:

Out of the holding cell stumbles a bloody and battered man, clutching his side.

- The captive is now a Rebel figure (Health: 8, Speed: 2, Defense: 1 white die). Heroes control the captive as an ally.
- When the captive is targeted for an attack while adjacent to a hero who could also be a target of that attack, that hero may suffer 1 to become the target of the attack.
- The captive can escape through the entrance, ending the mission ( ).

The Imperial player chooses 1 of the following:

- The captive becomes Bleeding.
- Increase by 3.

THE DATA

When the terminal is destroyed:

You smash the data center, scattering the sensitive electronics across the room in several ruined pieces. When you're finished, nothing is left in the room but smoldering wreckage.

Whatever secrets were stolen, they're safe from the Empire now. All that remains is to escape with the operative.

- Increase by 3.

END OF MISSION

When the captive escapes:

After a few days of medical attention, the operative is finally coherent enough to talk. He quickly redirects you to a safe house where he hid stolen schematics for the new Imperial weapon, which you deliver to High Command for analysis.

- Place Story Mission card "Incoming" into play. Each hero receives 1 XP.

When the captive is defeated or when all heroes are wounded:

Returning to High Command empty-handed, you try not to think about the fate of the operative you left behind.

Fortunately, the operative managed to deliver stolen weapons schematics to a safe house, discovered by Rebel forces shortly after your rescue attempt.

- Place Story Mission card "Drawn In" into play. The Imperial player receives 1 XP.

ADDITIONAL REWARDS

Analysis of Weiss's weapon reveals it to be a smaller-scale version of the devastating Death Star superlaser. This new version is designed for fleet superiority instead of planetary destruction. "From all appearances, they could be mass-produced and fitted to capital ships," your commander tells you, a grim tone in her voice.

She makes it clear that the Rebel fleet would have no answer to this firepower. "It might be that we could develop it ourselves, but our engineers can't seem to figure out a few of the last pieces. We think the plans must be old, or incomplete."

- Each player receives 1 XP in addition to any that he already received. Heroes receive 100 credits per hero. The Imperial player receives 1 influence.
- If the heroes destroyed the terminal, they receive 100 credits per hero. Otherwise, the Imperial player receives 1 influence.

MISSION BRIEFING

While Rebel forces scour the galaxy in search of information on Weiss's weapon project, Captain Solo hasn't checked in for a few days.

You're quick to remind your commander that this hasn't been unusual behavior for the smuggler, but she shrugs and replies, "Captain Solo said something about a promising lead in his last check-in. We just want to find him and follow up."

Thus, you now find yourselves retracing his previous steps. After going through several locations and contacts, this latest one shows promise. Not only does it represent Solo's last known location, but there are also a fair number of Imperial troops patrolling the nearby vicinity.

- The door to the Back Room is locked. A hero can interact with the door ( ) to open it.
- The mission will progress when the door to the Back Room opens ( ) or at the end of Round 3.

DARING ESCAPE

At the end of Round 3, if the door to the Back Room is closed:

A door at the back of the bar bursts open, and a battered Han Solo stumbles through the opening.

His wrists are still bound, but in his hands he holds a blaster, firing back into the room he just departed.

- Open the door to the Back Room, but do not resolve "Strange Patrons."
- Deploy the reserved Stormtrooper group to the Back Room. Each one suffers 2 .
- Deploy Han Solo (Scoundrel) to the blue point. He suffers 4 .
- Increase by 4.
- Resolve "Time to Run."

STRANGE PATRONS

When the door to the Back Room opens:

When you kicked in the door, you had expected to find a back room filled with Sabacc tables, not a fully functioning Imperial observation post.

Screens cover the walls and voices crackle from multiple speakers. Computers and monitoring equipment are scattered everywhere. At the back of the room, in a small holding cell barred by a force field, sits Han Solo.

"Watch it!" he shouts, motioning to the troops in the room, who scramble for their weapons.

There's a small rumbling beneath your feet. The lights in the room flicker, and the force field dies. "Nice timing, Chewie," Han grins to himself as he dives for the nearest blaster.

- Deploy the reserved Stormtrooper group and Imperial Officer to the Back Room with exhausted Deployment cards. Deploy Han Solo (Scoundrel) to the Storage Closet with an exhausted Deployment card.
- Resolve "Time to Run."

TIME TO RUN

After Han Solo is deployed:

"You guys look familiar!" Han shouts, sending blaster fire toward his former captors. He opens his mouth to speak again but stops short, diving to the ground as the Imperials return fire.

"Talk later!" he calls out as he scrambles toward cover.

- Deploy the reserved IG-88 to the entrance.
- Heroes control Han Solo as an ally.
- Han Solo can escape through the entrance.
- The mission ends when Han Solo escapes ( ) or when he is defeated.

The Imperial player chooses 1 of the following:

- IG-88 performs a move.
- Increase by 4.

END OF MISSION

When Han Solo escapes:

Slipping through alleys and dodging past Imperial troops, you make your way to Han's ship. Chewbacca stands waiting at the hatch, releasing a guttural roar at the sight of Han. "Yeah, yeah, I know!" Han says, waving him off.

"Look, we're getting outta here, but this is everything I could find on the weapon." He hands you a small data cube before scrambling up the ramp into the Falcon.

- Place Story Mission card "Incoming" into play. Each hero receives 1 XP.

When Han Solo is defeated:

A blaster bolt clips Han's shoulder. With a shout of pain, he scrambles around a corner. Imperials move to block your path to him. Before ducking out of sight, he throws something toward you.

Amid a hail of blaster fire, you snatch up the object, a small data cube, and make your escape in the other direction.

- Place Story Mission card "Drawn In" into play. The Imperial player receives 1 XP.

ADDITIONAL REWARDS

The information obtained from the data cube reveals the weapon General Weiss is developing for capital ships. It's advanced and quite sophisticated, with destructive capabilities outclassing anything the Rebellion has at its disposal.

- Each player receives 1 XP in addition to any that he already received. Heroes receive 100 credits per hero. The Imperial player receives 1 influence.
- If "Daring Escape" did not trigger, heroes receive 100 credits per hero. Otherwise, the Imperial player receives 1 influence.

MISSION BRIEFING

Rebel engineers are concluding their analysis of the schematics. Hoping to keep their discoveries secret, Command has sent you to keep an eye on their progress and hand-deliver their results.

Much to your surprise, you arrive to a facility in shambles and overrun by Imperial forces. Worse, your approaching transport is fired upon and brought into a rough landing.

Fleeing through the forest with a battalion pursuing close behind, you come across a listening post for the facility. You recall that this area has a network of tunnels connecting the facility with emergency escape routes.

You should be able to access the escape tunnels through the listening post if you can manage to find their entrance before the Imperial forces catch up.

- A hero can interact with a terminal (3 or) to reveal it. If an Imperial figure is within 2 spaces of that hero, apply -1 to the results.
- The mission will progress when a Rebel figure enters the Corridor ( ). The mission ends when all heroes are wounded or at the end of Round 7.

BOMBARDMENT

The first time a Rebel figure enters the Corridor:

- Imperial mission tokens represent rubble. Rubble is difficult terrain. If rubble is adjacent to the outside edge of the map, it is considered to be an active deployment point.
- At the end of each round, the Imperial player bombards the structure.

  When this happens, he places 1 Imperial mission token on any interior space in line of sight of an Imperial figure. Then, each figure within 3 spaces of that space suffers 2 or becomes Stunned, Imperial player's choice.
- The mission will progress when both yellow terminals are revealed ( ).

▸ Bombard the structure.

PURSUIT

At the end of the round in which a Rebel figure enters the Corridor for the first time:

▸ Deploy the reserved Stormtrooper group Imperial Officer, and Imperial Officer.

SCHEMATICS

When the first yellow terminal is revealed:

Shoving aside rubble, you finally locate a terminal with information you can use. The building shudders against another heavy impact as you frantically scour the files for any details on the underground tunnels.

You find schematics for the tunnels themselves and map out a quick route, but some of the schematics have been damaged. The portion that could show you how to get into the tunnels from this listening post is a mess of garbled lines and text. You'll have to find another copy of the schematics.

▸ Bombard the structure.

HIDDEN PASSAGE

When the second yellow terminal is revealed:

Dust and stone fragments shower from the ceiling; the structure is now under constant attack.

You consider trying your luck against the mass of Imperial forces outside just as you find the controls to open the underground tunnels.

Pressing a series of commands, you expect the hidden blast door to grind open. Instead, you hear the loud whine of metal under strain followed by a high-pitched screech. Red warnings display across the terminal screen.

Jammed. Of course.

▸ Place the neutral mission token on the red point.

▸ Bombard the structure.

- The neutral mission token represents the blast door. A hero can interact with the blast door (3) to open the passage, ending the mission ( ).

END OF MISSION

When the passage is opened:

You manage to pry the blast doors open just enough for everyone to squeeze through, right before one final explosion sends heavy stones thundering down. Dust and fragments of rock flood into the tunnel, but you're already on the move.

It might still take some careful maneuvering to duck the Imperials when you return to the surface, but for now, you're home free.

It's a bitter victory with the loss of the outpost. The schematics are gone, along with whatever detailed analysis the Rebel engineers could have provided.

▸ Place Story Mission card "Chain of Command" into play. Each hero receives 1 XP.

At the end of Round 7 or when all heroes are wounded:

With one final blast, the building rumbles around you, heavy stone fragments raining down from above.

Your only choices become staying inside as the structure collapses around you, fighting your way out, or surrendering.

Charging outside, you're ready to put up the fight of your lives until you see just how many Imperial troops stand waiting outside. Several dozen blasters are pointed in your direction, and surrender becomes your only option.

▸ Place Story Mission card "The Source" into play. The Imperial player receives 1 XP. Play "Captured" (page 5) as a forced mission.

ADDITIONAL REWARDS

▸ Each player receives 1 XP in addition to any that he already received. Heroes receive 100 credits per hero. The Imperial player receives 1 influence.

▸ If the passage was opened before the end of Round 5, heroes receive 100 credits per hero. Otherwise, the Imperial player receives 1 influence.

DRAWN IN

MISSION BRIEFING

You travel back toward the Rebel engineering facility where analysts are working with the stolen weapons schematics. The hope of the Rebellion rests upon their findings.

Moments after you drop out of hyperspace, you're thrown to the floor of your ship. Shouting curses, your pilot yells, "Star Destroyer! They've got us in a tractor beam!"

There isn't much time to prepare, but your pilot brings up a power flow schematic of the enemy ship.

"Look! Here, here, and here!" He jabs a finger at the display. "Assuming you aren't shot to bits the moment you hit the flight deck, destroying these stations should knock out tractor beam control for this section of the ship! Just be quick about it!"

Bursting out of your ship, you cut through the immediate resistance, using the assistance of an exterior turret. Then, you climb aboard a service elevator which slowly rises towards the main deck.

"Freeze!" a trooper shouts as the elevator shudders into place. It seems you're surrounded. "Stand down and surrender your weapons!"

Counting the number of soldiers around you, you're almost insulted.

- Terminals represent power stations. Rebel figures can attack a power station (Health: 8, Defense: 1 ▼).
- Doors are locked to heroes. A hero can interact with a door (or) to open it.
- When a hero withdraws, he is incapacitated instead. When activating, he receives only 1 action and can only use that action to perform a move.
- When all 4 power stations have been destroyed and all heroes are on or adjacent to the entrance, the heroes depart.
- The mission ends when the heroes depart ( ) or when all heroes are wounded.

SUBDUE

At the end of each Round:

The Imperial player chooses 1 of the following. He may then spend 1 to choose 1 other additional option:

- Open or close 1 door.
- 1 : Choose 1 crate on the map. Each Imperial figure within 3 spaces of that crate recovers 2 .
- 1 : Choose 1 Stormtrooper group. Each figure in that group may perform 1 move or 1 attack.
- 2 : If the Royal Guard Champion has been deployed, he may perform 1 action.

ARRIVAL

When 2 power stations are destroyed:

The door to a side corridor slides open. Out strides an Imperial Guard quite different from the usual stock.

He wears black with red trim and carries a long staff with blades at each end. Though you don't recognize him, his appearance and demeanor single him out as a powerful foe.

- Deploy the reserved Royal Guard Champion.

RAISE THE ALARMS

At the end of Round 5:

The Imperials were not expecting this much resistance from you, but they're quickly adapting to your aggression.

Alarms blare throughout the ship. If you don't get out of here soon, you're going to be overwhelmed.

- Increase by 3 at the start of each Status Phase.

When the heroes depart:

Bodies of Imperial troops lie throughout the area where your ship is waiting. The external blaster continues to fire, aiming at several stormtroopers hiding in cover.

"Finally!" your pilot shouts as you climb aboard. "I didn't think I could hold them off much longer." He punches the controls and blasts off.

Weaving through turbolaser fire, the transport flies clear of the Star Destroyer, only taking a few hits before slipping into hyperspace.

"Glad that you were able to escape," your commander sounds relieved when you check in, "but what about the outpost? The plans?"

You didn't see much going in or out, but Imperial presence was substantial. The quick scans revealed there to be nothing left of the outpost.

- Place Story Mission card "Chain of Command" into play. Each hero receives 1 XP.

When all heroes are wounded:

MISSION BRIEFING

Desperate after the loss of their engineering facility, High Command wishes to recover ground.

Thus, you're sent directly to Coruscant. Your task is to find final, detailed schematics of the weapon and bring them back at all costs.

It takes days of infiltration before you can get to Coruscant and find Weiss's facility. Executing a plan to get inside is no easier, but fortunately you manage it without incident. With explosives laid to cover an emergency retreat, you sneak through the dark corners of the base.

"General Weiss has arrived," a message blares in the corridors, bringing with it a new idea and opportunity.

If you were to defeat and capture the general, not only could he be interrogated, but his plans would certainly falter without his guiding hand.

- The Imperial Officer is Weiss. Apply +6 Health and +1 Speed to Weiss. Apply +2 ✖ to each of his attack results and +1 ▼ to each of his defense results.
- An Imperial figure can interact with a terminal to increase ⚙ by 2. This can be performed on each terminal once per round.
- The door is locked to heroes. A hero can interact with the door (2 or) to open it.
- A Rebel figure can attack a terminal (Health: 8, Defense: 1 ▼).
- The mission ends when Weiss is defeated (✪) or when all heroes are wounded.

VULNERABLE

At the end of Round 2:

The elevator arrives. In a crouched position sits a scout walker covered in advanced weaponry. It lays still and silent, lacking a pilot. An encoded lock with a palm reader lies near the hatch. Even if you weren't in a firefight, you don't know if you'd be able to crack it.

- Deploy the reserved General Weiss figure to the red points. When placing the figure, its base must occupy all red points. This is the inactive AT-ST.
- General Weiss (inactive AT-ST) is an Imperial figure that cannot move or attack but can still be attacked.
- Weiss (Imperial Officer) can interact with the inactive AT-ST to enter it.

The Imperial player chooses 1 of the following:

- Weiss recovers 5 ✖ and gains 3 movement points.
- Weiss interrupts to perform 2 attacks.

INVULNERABLE

When Weiss enters the inactive AT-ST:

Covered by his troops, Weiss makes a mad dash toward his vehicle, palming the entrance hatch and slipping inside.

"Yes. This is much better." His augmented voice echoes in the wide hangar as the walker powers up and swivels toward you. "Now, where were we?"

- Discard the Imperial Officer and set aside the corresponding Deployment card. General Weiss recovers 5 ✖ and gains 3 movement points.
- General Weiss now activates as normal. His figure cannot exit the Hangar.
- At the start of General Weiss's activation, the Imperial player can spend 2 ⚙ for General Weiss to recover 5 ✖.
- When an attack targeting General Weiss is declared, the Imperial player can spend 2 ⚙ to apply +3 ▼ to the defense results.
- The mission ends when General Weiss is defeated (✪).

END OF MISSION

When Weiss is defeated or General Weiss is defeated after Weiss has entered the inactive AT-ST:

There is no weapon. There never was.

After sealing off the area, you attempt to retrieve the final schematics from Weiss's computer. Instead, you find a series of battle plans, contingencies, and positioning of a substantial Imperial fleet. All of this lies waiting for a Rebel attack at the location of the weapon's supposed development. An ambush.

"It was almost too easy to fool you." Weiss remains calm as you lead him toward your escape tunnel. "You're always so desperate to make a last stand. It is easy to encourage."

An explosion blasts through one of the sealed doors as he finishes speaking. Seizing the opportunity, Weiss pulls free of your grasp, diving to the ground as a hail of blaster fire pours through the opening.

"I'm fine, go after them!" he shouts, shaking off the assistance of Imperial soldiers and pointing down the hangar toward you.

- Place Story Mission card "Last Stand" into play. Each hero receives 1 XP.

When all heroes are wounded:

"After them!" Weiss commands. "Don't allow them to escape!"

Knowing the task has failed, you trigger the explosive charges you planted and set off down your escape route.

- Place Story Mission card "Desperate Hour" into play. The Imperial player receives 1 XP.

ADDITIONAL REWARDS

- Each player receives 1 XP in addition to any that he already received. Heroes receive 100 credits per hero. The Imperial player receives 1 influence.
- If Weiss was defeated before he entered the inactive AT-ST, the heroes receive 100 credits per hero. Otherwise, the Imperial player receives 1 influence.

THE SOURCE

MISSION BRIEFING

"Spies have tracked down the primary manufacturing plant in Weiss's supply chain," your commander informs you. "It isn't much, but its records could indicate shipping patterns, perhaps even containing the location of the prototype weapon." She sounds both desperate and excited. "This could be the real thing. Make us all proud."

Security in the plant is tight, surprisingly so, and each door takes considerable time to hack or break through. Every moment risks your discovery, and you're about to give up when opportunity strikes.

"I don't care about your excuses. Kill the blasted creatures if you cannot keep them contained." A scowling officer comes down the hall. He speaks into a comlink. "Drag me into this festering hole again and I'll see that you become their next meal."

He lowers the comlink just as you spring from cover, jamming a blaster into his ribs and suggesting he behave himself and do as you request.

- The Imperial Officer on the Junk Shop has been captured and is a neutral figure.
- Doors are locked.
- A Rebel figure can interact with the captured officer to perform the following:
  - The hero and the captured officer each move 2 spaces.
  - Open a door adjacent to the officer.
  - Secure a terminal adjacent to the officer.
- If there are no healthy Rebel figures within 3 spaces of the captured officer, an Imperial figure can interact with the officer to free him.
- The mission ends when the terminal is secured (), when the captured officer is freed, at the end of Round 8, or when all heroes are wounded.

OPPORTUNE MOMENT

At the end of each Round:

The Imperial player chooses 1 of the following:

- Move the captured officer 1 space.
- Resolve the "Order" ability of the captured officer, choosing an Imperial figure within his line of sight instead of within 2 spaces.
- Each Imperial figure in line of sight of the captured officer gains 2 movement points.
- 1: 1 Imperial figure can perform 1 move and 1 attack.

AWAITING DEPARTURE

When the door to the Inspection Station opens:

"It won't work, you know," the officer says as he inputs yet another unique code. "My people will fight to protect me."

The door opens, and several blaster bolts sizzle by, narrowly missing the officer. "Watch your aim, you fools!" he shouts.

- The yellow deployment point is now active. The green deployment point is now inactive.
- Deploy the reserved Stormtrooper group and Imperial Officer to the Incinerator.

ON BOARD

When the door to the Security Station opens:

"Listen, I'm sure we can come to an arrangement." The officer is getting more nervous as you draw closer to your objective. "Please, you don't understand!"

It takes a little more coaxing to get him to open the door, but eventually he complies, sweat dripping down his face.

- The red deployment point is now active. The yellow deployment point is now inactive.
- Deploy the reserved Stormtrooper group to the Security Station and the reserved Imperial Officer to a space adjacent to the terminal.

END OF MISSION

When the terminal is secured:

The officer swallows hard, stepping away from the command terminal. "There, as you can see, it's a waste of your time."

At first glance, that appears true. In spite of numerous shipments to a primary location, none of the materials are related to weaponry.

After only a few questions, the officer cracks. "There's no weapon!" he shouts. "It's all a trick to lure out the Rebel fleet. I told him that Strang's plan was far more suited-"

You cut him off, examining the terminal with this new information in mind. Indeed, you can see the seeds of the deception. With this information, and a new prisoner, perhaps this can be turned to the Rebellion's advantage.

- Place Story Mission card "Last Stand" into play. Each hero receives 1 XP.

When the captured officer is freed, at the end of Round 8, or when all heroes are wounded:

The officer scrambles away from you, shouting, "Shoot them, you fools! Don't let them escape!" Alarms ring in the background, and you cut through the Imperial forces, trying to catch up to your former captive.

However, it's too late. He disappears through an opening, and the door slides shut and locks. By the time you break through this door, he'll be long gone.

- Place Story Mission card "Desperate Hour" into play. The Imperial player receives 1 XP.

ADDITIONAL REWARDS

- Each player receives 1 XP in addition to any that he already received. Heroes receive 100 credits per hero. The Imperial player receives 1 influence.
- If the terminal is secured before the end of Round 6, heroes receive 100 credits per hero.
- If the officer is freed before the heroes open the door to the Security Station, the Imperial player receives 1 influence.

MISSION BRIEFING

Weaving through the intense battle, your transport dodges TIE Fighters and turbolaser fire. The Rebel fleet opened the battle with a feint, drawing out Weiss's ambush and then springing a trap of its own.

As you descend into the atmosphere of the planet, the battle becomes a blaze of flashing lights above the clouds. From what you could tell before descending, the Rebellion had the upper hand.

You've tracked Weiss's personal shuttle to an Imperial base on the surface below. Capturing him could lead to an early end to the battle and victory for the Rebellion, so you are told to take him alive if you can.

- Doors are locked. A Rebel figure can attack a door (Health 5, Defense: 1 black die), or a hero can interact with a door ( ) to open it.
- The mission will progress when the first door opens ( ). The mission ends at the end of Round 12 or when all heroes are wounded.

WELCOMING PARTY

The first time the first door opens:

- Deploy the reserved Royal Guard group and Probe Droid to the Warehouse.
- The blue deployment points are now active. The green deployment points are now inactive.
- The mission will progress when the second door opens ( ).

DEFENSES BREACHED

The first time the second door opens:

- Deploy the reserved Imperial Officer and Probe Droid to the Medical Center. Then deploy the reserved Stormtrooper group to the Reception Chamber.
- The yellow deployment points are now active. The blue deployment points are now inactive.
- The mission will progress when the door to the Command Center opens ( ).

END OF THE LINE

The first time a door to the Command Center opens:

The door opens to reveal Weiss, on his knees before Darth Vader, who looms over the General with an outstretched hand.

"Lord Vader, please!" General Weiss's hands grasp at the collar of his uniform, struggling to choke out his last few words. "Not a failure… merely… a… setback…"

Before you can decide whether to try to save the General or flee in terror, Weiss crumples to the ground.

Vader slowly turns toward you, a grim silence in the room save for the soft hissing of his breathing apparatus. He appraises each of you before the blazing red of his lightsaber springs to life.

- Deploy the reserved Darth Vader to the red point. Close the first and second doors.
- Apply +8 to Darth Vader's Health. Instead of activating as normal, Darth Vader performs 1 action after each hero's activation.
- Darth Vader cannot receive conditions.
- Darth Vader gains : Move up to 2 spaces and perform an attack.
- When an attack targeting Darth Vader is declared, the Imperial player can spend 2 to apply +2 to the defense results.
- The mission ends when Darth Vader is defeated ( ).

END OF MISSION

When Darth Vader is defeated:

You keep Vader on the defensive, spreading out and never allowing him to isolate any one of you. Soon you begin to drive him back, coordinating your strikes with absolute precision.

Vader staggers under your assault, and you think you may even be able to defeat him. He ceases fighting and raises both arms, ignoring the fire you continue to pour upon him. The room trembles, and the walls buckle inward with a screech of protesting metal. You're thrown to the ground as the structure is ripped apart by his awesome power.

By the time you crawl free of the twisted wreck, there is no sign of Vader. As you depart in your transport, you see the wreckage of the Imperial fleet floating in space around you. Though you know that the war is far from over, your efforts have contributed toward a great victory for the Rebel Alliance.

- The Rebel players win the campaign!

At the end of Round 12 or when all heroes are wounded:

Vader is too powerful, and one by one you fall to his might.

Those who survived are taken prisoner. From what you hear, Rebel forces were defeated in the skies above while you struggled against the Dark Lord. You think it must be propaganda, but it is difficult to know for certain.

A large spectacle is made of your trial on Coruscant. Your activities in recent months are dragged out; it's almost an honor to relive your exploits. In the end, you're charged with high treason, which carries a death sentence.

You'll never know what your contribution provided to the Rebellion in your final days. Despite the Imperial propaganda, however, you truly believe that the victory was decisive, that your part in it was important, and most of all that your sacrifice will be remembered.

- The Imperial player wins the campaign!

MISSION BRIEFING

You've punched your way through Weiss's facility, ready to destroy the weapon, steal its schematics, and prepare for the Rebel fleet to wipe all traces of Weiss and his forces away. You didn't expect there to be nothing.

"This place looks pretty empty," your pilot tells you, completing his scan. "There are a few stray troopers, but nothing major." Upon landing, you see no signs of any manufacturing. When you reach the command center, the only thing you can find is a battle plan showing numerous angles of attack upon a section of ships labeled "Rebel Fleet."

You hear heavy footfalls behind you, and the doors leading out slide shut.

- Doors are locked. A Rebel figure can attack either door to the Hangar (Health: 6, Defense: None).
- A "Massive" figure can move through and occupy interior spaces.
- The mission will progress when either door to the Hangar opens (Rebel). The mission ends at the end of Round 8 or when all heroes are wounded.

NOT SO FAST

The first time a door to the Hangar opens:

"Always so desperate," an amplified voice echoes in the hangar as the door opens.

One of Weiss's modified walkers stands before you, aiming its many weapons in your direction. "The slightest whisper of new weapons, new threats, and you risk so much on nothing but a rumor. How can your kind possibly govern a galaxy?"

"I was almost hoping you wouldn't be fooled," Weiss says, a note of disappointment in his voice. "Yes, the weapon is a complete farce. Your fleet will be ambushed and destroyed. If you do not wish to join them, surrender."

- Deploy the reserved General Weiss to the yellow point.
- The mission will progress when General Weiss is defeated (Rebel).

RESPITE

When General Weiss is defeated:

- Deploy the reserved AT-ST to the yellow point.

Another of Weiss's walkers steps through the field in the hangar as you find only a transmitter in the cockpit of the first.

"You cannot win," Weiss says. "Surren-"

There's a burst of feedback, followed by static. "Hmm..." you hear your pilot through the comlink. "Well, that wasn't so hard." The walker swivels back and forth. "Just give me a sec to get the hang of this."

- Open all doors.
- Deploy the reserved Imperial Officer, Stormtrooper, and Royal Guard groups.
- The AT-ST is a Rebel figure. Heroes control it as an ally. The AT-ST gains General Weiss's "Epic Arsenal" ability. Instead of activating as normal, the AT-ST performs one action after each hero's activation.
- The mission will progress when a Rebel figure enters the Clearing (Rebel).

THE BITTER END

The first time a Rebel figure enters the Clearing:

Another of the modified walkers stands in the way, this one featuring even more armor plating and weaponry. Weiss leans out of the top, shaking his head. "Very clever, intercepting my signal. Too clever for your own good." He descends into the cockpit.

- Deploy General Weiss to the Canyon. Deploy the reserved E-Web Engineer and Trandoshan Hunter group to any red point.
- All doors close and are locked (including destroyed doors). Any figure can attack a door (Health: 10, Defense: 2 ▼).
- Apply +10 Health to General Weiss. Instead of activating as normal, General Weiss performs 1 action after each Imperial group activation.
- The red deployment points are now active.
- The mission ends when General Weiss is defeated a second time (Rebel).

END OF MISSION

When General Weiss is defeated for a second time:

You drag the unconscious, wounded Weiss out of his walker and bind him. Getting to your ship, you send warnings out to the Rebel fleet.

The battle had already begun, the Rebel ships drawn in by a smaller force, but your warning came just before the larger Imperial force moved to block retreat.

Though just barely, your warning allows the Rebel ships to turn and make their retreat just as the mass of Imperial forces begins to bear down upon them.

A transmission comes in from your commander: "We made it out! We sustained minor casualties, but it could have been much worse. We all owe you our lives. Thank you; The Force was truly with you."

- The heroes win the campaign!

At the end of Round 8 or when all heroes are wounded:

Weiss shows mercy, treating you with every courtesy. Your wounds are tended to, you're given food, and you're even allowed a limited amount of movement within the facility.

The Rebel fleet is torn apart in the ambush above the planet, dozens of valuable ships lost. After the battle concludes, Weiss releases you.

"Your failure is so entirely complete that I don't believe you'll return to your Rebel allies," he tells you as he sends you out. "Good luck in your future endeavors. When the sting of this defeat has dulled, consider returning. I can always use individuals with your skills."

- The Imperial player wins the campaign!
